New Program Offers El. Ed. Majors 'On The Job' Training

Eastern elementary and special education majors have participated this past fall in a new program designed to give them additional "on the job" training in their area of specialization.

The new concept was instituted by the Department of Elementary, Junior High, and Special Education at the beginning of the Fall Semester, according to Dr. Carol Helwig, one of the program coordinators.

Four area schools are participating in the project. Located in Urbana, Jonell Hastings, left, a teacher at the Weber School in Urbana, and Eastern student Pam Petges engage in planning for Eastern's new program for pre-school teaching for elementary education majors.

they include Weber, Thomas Paine, and Yankee Rich elementary schools and Brookens Junior High School.

The program was created after the closure of Eastern's lab school last spring, but it had actually been planned prior to that time. Groundwork for the proposal was laid in the summer of 1973 at a meeting of principals of the Urbana schools. The project provides a two semester package consisting of one term of pre-student teaching followed by a semester of student teaching.

This innovative plan exposes Eastern students to alternative educational programs such as the open class room, team teaching, and multi-age and multi-graded classes. "Theoretical concepts discussed in the class room become more real and meaningful with experience like this," said Dr. Helwig, "Our students' collegiate work is continued while they are in a learning laboratory." Credit for a number of Education courses is earned through participation in the off campus program.

The off campus environment has been very successful so far, said Dr. Helwig. "The students have really become involved," she commented. "They go to P.T.A. meetings, and one of our students even took her class to a circus."

This fall a representative of an American institution spoke to some of Eastern's Business School classes. The representative? Tom Spitz, '64, Eastern alumnus. The institution? McDonald's Corporation — the hamburger people.

Spitz, who left Eastern ten years ago as a marketing graduate, is now the national promotion manager for McDonald's System Incorporated, those friendly folks who have sold the American public 15 billion (at this writing) hamburgers.

Spitz's work is responsible for the sale of at least some of that stupendous amount of meat, but it wasn't always so. Back in 1964, somewhere near the 1 billionth hamburger, Spitz went to work not for McDonald's but for the A. B. Dick Company. He was employed there as the sales promotion department's editor of the company's house publication. Two years later he was made sales promotion manager for a year and was then promoted to marketing research analyst where he served the company for two more years.

In the meantime Spitz had picked up an MBA from Roosevelt University in Chicago. In February of

Tom Spitz, '64

Portrait Of An Alumnus

1969 he joined McDonald's as an assistant marketing research manager. After five years at various managerial levels within the corporation, Spitz was appointed national promotional manager last March.

In the profusion of assistants, deputies, managers, chiefs and directors that are a part of most large companies, job identification is sometimes difficult. In this case, duties are clear cut. "I'm responsible for advertising, and promotional work and all our marketing programs," said Spitz, who was attired in slacks and a brown blazer with a small yellow representation of McDonald's golden arches sewn on the pocket. "I'm also responsible for annual marketing plans, promotional recommendations, media buying marketing research techniques and public relations activities."

Spitz finds his job rewarding and interesting. "I think one reason I like it is because I'm into work with a concept that fits into Americana. We're always working with a slice of life that people can relate to," he said.

Computer May Help Save Energy At Eastern

Winter is here and steps are being taken at Eastern to conserve energy during the cold weather ahead. "We again plan to lower thermostats to 68 degrees," said Harley J. Holt, Vice President for Business Services, and we have a number of other projects underway."

One of the most exciting of those projects is well along in the planning stages. The program involves the use of an IBM System Seven Computer to automatically regulate heating and air conditioning levels on a campus wide basis.

"We have over three thousand thermostats which could be turned down well below 68 degrees at night but we simply don't have the personnel to do this manually" Holt related. "With the System Seven, however, it can be done automatically and it will save the University a good deal of money."

The system, which is operated by a specially designed computer pro-

One energy saving measure in use at Eastern is the technique of using only every other light in corridors as is seen here in the Booth Library stacks.

Alumni Gifts Support New Projects

Eastern alumni are major participants in the support of several new university programs.

President Gilbert C. Fite has announced that unrestricted gifts by Eastern alumni have provided most of the funds supporting a number of new projects, including the programs recommended by the Campus Committee on Improvement of Instruction and approved by Dr. Peter R. Moody, Provost and Vice President for Academic Affairs.

The gifts are made as part of the annual alumni giving program conducted through the office of University Relations and Alumni Services.

Instructional improvement programs presently being funded are, by department: English, "Study of the Improvement of Composition instruction"; Sociology, "Scholar-Student Videotaped Panel Discussion"; Speech Pathology and Audiology, "Self Instructional Materials"; Mathematics, "A Metric Manual"; Health Education, "Development of an Instructional Center for Teacher Preparation in Health"; "Secondary Education, "Developing Materials for 'Education and Culture' Modules in Social Foundations of Education; A Project for Improving Instruction in a Large Graduate Class"; and Elementary and Junior High School

Education, "Camera Techniques for EED 3290: Science in the Elementary School."

A number of other projects have also been made possible through charitable gifts from alumni and friends of the University. Among these are the creation of an Eastern Illinois University National Merit Scholarship, an incentive program through which academic departments may seek additional ways to supplement their offerings through visiting scholars, seminars, and other means, and a research specialists conference which will assist faculty members in their efforts to obtain federal research grants.

Career

Capsules

Ivan Joel Mitchell, '30

Mr. Mitchell is the former Director of Agencies for the Prudential Insurance Company. He graduated from Eastern in 1930 with a major in Education and went on to a distinguished, 36-year career at Prudential. He is presently retired. Ivan is a member and past president of several national and local organizations and associations. He and his wife, Cecile, reside at Lake Santa Fe, in Melrose, Florida.

Don L. Grantham, '37

Mr. Grantham is President of Beatrice Foods, Inc., one of the world's largest food-related organizations. He attended Eastern in 1933 and joined Beatrice Foods in 1934 as an accountant in a Meadow Gold Plant. He soon moved into management, and in 1963 was elected a director of the corporation. In 1972, Mr. Grantham became the company's fifth president in 72 years of operation. Don, his wife and family make their home at 201 North Greenbay Rd. in Lake Forest, Illinois.

Carol Ann Smith, '60

Ms. Smith is the assistant dean of the University of Illinois College of

Carol Ann Smith

Law at Champaign-Urbana. She graduated from Eastern with a B.A.

in English in 1967. While in school and out she worked for several newspapers. In 1970, she entered the U of I Law School. Carol has won numerous awards for her journalistic talent including prized special awards from Associated Press and United Press International. She has been associated with a Champaign law firm, but presently acts as placement director, director of alumni relations, and coordinator of public information for the law school. Ms. Smith resides at 302 E. John in Champaign, Illinois.

Norman L. Chapman, '58

Mr. Chapman is President and Chairman of the Board of the Security Pacific Leasing Corporation with offices in San Francisco and Los Angeles. The company is a subsidiary of the Security Pacific Corporation, the holding company for the Security Pacific National Bank. Mr. Chapman received his B.S. in Business from Eastern in 1958 and has almost 16 years experience in various financial areas. Norman and his wife live at 1934 Leavenworth in San Francisco, California.

Magazine Keeps Alumni Informed

Alumni from Naperville, Illinois to Nairobi, Kenya are among the seven thousand Easternites who receive the Eastern Alumnus magazine from their alma mater.

Four times a year the Alumni Office posts news about Eastern and its alumni, campus events, athletic programs, and other information to members of the Eastern Illinois University Alumni Association.

Readers of the magazine may be interested in knowing a little about how their alumni publication gets to them throughout the year.

Every issue actually begins about two months before it is received by each of its seven thousand readers. Material for articles, news items and features is gathered in rough form. Alumni information cards, notes and letters from alumni, and press releases about Eastern graduates from other schools or business concerns are compiled and edited to make up the News Notes section of the magazine. Sports stories and other athletic information for the magazine's sports section is contributed by Eastern's sports information director Dave Kidwell, '70.

Once all the "raw material" of the Alumnus is collected, the actual stories and other items are written. This "copy" is then sent to the printer, where it is set in type, and printed on a galley proof.

When the galley proofs have been completed, the magazine is "laid out" or designed, page by page. The galleys are proof read and returned, along with the lay out sheets, to the printer.

Next, page proofs are set by the printer, using the layout sheets as a guide, and returned to the Alumni Office. Here these are again proof read, and sent back to the printer for his final production of the magazine.

Once the magazine has been printed and delivered to campus, preparation for mailing is made by student help in the Alumni Office.

Each magazine is addressed by means of an Addressograph machine, and then, because it is mailed second class, is sorted into zip code stacks. These are next bundled, and then sacked. The sacks are taken by campus postal personnel to the Charleston Post Office where they are mailed to Alumni Association members throughout the United States and thirty eight foreign countries.

If you would like a news item printed in the Alumnus or would like to comment about the magazine, please let us know. The Alumni Office reserves the right to edit all news items. Send your news notes and other correspondence to Charles Titus, Editor, The Eastern Alumnus, 109 Old Main, Eastern Illinois University, Charleston, IL 61920.

Hello!

Clabaugh Retires

Representative Charles W. Clabaugh, '23, a longtime advocate for education and educational reform is retiring after 36 years of legislative service.

Representative Clabaugh was elected to the Illinois State House of Representatives in 1938 and has served continuously since that time for a total of 18 terms. Born near Lerna, Illinois, he graduated in 1923 from Eastern with a B. Ed degree. He was a history and government major. Mr. Clabaugh taught 5 years in Illinois high schools and one year at Eastern. In 1926, he became a building specialties contractor in Champaign where he operated that business for 40 years.

Representative Clabaugh served on the House Education Committee 36 years and acted as chairman for 16. He has been a member or chairman of several commissions on education and has sponsored numerous key bills including the Illinois original Junior College Act and the Special Education Act. Of the 617 bills he has sponsored during his career, 435 were related to education.

Mr. Clabaugh has received several awards for distinguished public service and was awarded the Illinois Man of the Year Award in 1961. Mr. Clabaugh resides at 405 W. University in Champaign.

Union Addition Opens

Five years after its first planning, the new addition to the Martin Luther King Jr. University Union has been completed.

The building, which was initially planned in 1969, was opened for general use January 16, the beginning of the Spring term. Construction on the building started in the fall of 1972.

The new addition contains 94,000 square feet and will house offices for the Student Senate, University Board, and Director of Student Activities. Also in the new addition is the Alumni Lounge, which contains a plaque engraved with the names of all Distinguished Alumni Award Recipients. Portrait photos of current recipients are also hung in the Lounge.

The structure will also provide facilities for a bookstore, a vending and study room, a ballroom, and a Rathskellar.

Roberts Edits Prize Winner

A newspaper published by an Eastern alumnus has won a prestigious award in Illinois journalism. The Fairbury Blade, published by Jim Roberts, '46, recently received the Verle V. Kramer Memorial Trophy. The award is presented to the state's outstanding weekly or semi-weekly newspaper with a circulation of less than 5,000.

The Blade won eight individual awards for a total of 29 points in order to win the trophy. The paper received first place honors for best use of illustrated material and for best women's department.

Roberts, who was an editor of the Eastern News, has guided the Blade to a number of awards during the past several years.

Holiday Shutdown

Eastern's campus had a deserted look during the holiday period between December 20 and January 6. As part of an energy saving program most administrative offices and other facilities were not in use during the holidays.

This is the second year the University has instituted this energy conservation effort. Prior to the shut down during the holiday period last year the administrative offices at Eastern were open during the Christmas vacation even though classroom buildings and other instructional facilities were not in use. The University expects to reduce heating and lighting energy needs considerably during the shut down.

Available To Alumni

The Emerging University

The Emerging University: A History of Eastern Illinois University 1949-1974 is a complete and fascinating chronicle of our alma mater's past quarter century.

This volume supplements Dr. Charles Coleman's well-known Eastern Illinois State College: Fifty Years of Public Service and was written as a part of the University's Diamond Jubilee Celebration.

Edited by Dr. Donald Tingley, The Emerging University makes an ideal companion volume to the Coleman book or it can be valuable reading by itself.

Alumni who wish to purchase the history may do so by contacting the University Relations Office at Eastern. The book is priced at $2.50 per copy, and checks should be made payable to Eastern Illinois University.

Homecoming '74

Among Alumni who returned to Eastern were some of the school's early graduates. Here Torney P. Ivy, Class of 1909, talks with President Fite at the Alumni Coffee Hour, held in the Paul Sargent gallery.

'14 Alumna Recalls Earlier Days At Eastern

The following letter was written by Miss Helen F. Daringer, a member of the class of 1914. The letter was written to Mrs. Lela Gates, '14, and Mrs. Edna O'Day, '14, who organized the 1914 Class Reunion held this past Homecoming at Eastern.

The letter symbolizes a time in Eastern's past that serves as much of the base of the University today. Miss Daringer is a former faculty member at Eastern, and of Columbia University. She is the editor of an anthology of poetry, and has authored a number of books, including a grammar for junior high school use.

Dear Edna and Lela:

Reunion of the Class of 1914! It can't be sixty years since we sat in chapel for the last time. In memory I see Mr. Koch at the piano, hear the opening notes of the Doxology (none but Mr. Koch could make the Doxology as stirring as a call to arms). I hear Mr. Lord read from Ecclesiastes, his voice, his erect figure, his fine head and direct gaze all expressive of the man schooled in wisdom, rooted in integrity, generous of mind and heart. And the faculty, ranged in rows — my eyes travel from one to another, with gratitude and affection — Miss Weller, Mrs. Taylor, Miss Morse, Miss Geddes, Miss Reagon, Mr. Modesitt, Mr. Widger, Miss Johnson, Miss Booth, Miss Ford — and all the others, some half hidden in the back rows. The windows are open, the breeze brings the songs of cardinals and wood thrush, the squawk of a bluejay, and we, the class of 1914, feel ourselves very grown-up and pleasantly important. It was a school which called out the best in us, and we stand gratefully in its debt.

I wish I could come to the reunion — wish it more than I can say. I shall be counting over in thought the names of all my classmates, seeing them in imagination at the dinner table, hearing their laughter, their voices, and feeling myself sixty years younger with them.

Helen Fern Daringer, '14

Homecoming '74

Members of the Class of 1949 enjoy good fellowship and good food at their Silver Anniversary Reunion. The reunion was held on Homecoming Day in the ballroom of the University Union. The '74 Homecoming was the second which featured a reunion for Alumni who left Eastern 25 years ago.

Several members of the Class of 1964 were on hand for their class's Tenth Anniversary reunion. President Fite spoke briefly to the reunion alumni during lunch.

Big 3 Return

Hurlers Key To Diamond Panther Strength

If pitching is really 80% of winning baseball, then Eastern's diamondmen should have a fifth straight winning season.

New coach Jay Sanders inherits a strong mound staff led by the Big Three—Dwaine Nelson (Wheeling), Wally Ensinger (Lombard-Glenbard East) and Bill Tucker (Chicago Heights-Bloom).

This trio combined for an 18-11 record and a 2.06 ERA last spring, and then all three hurled for the Charleston-Mattoon Twins in the Central Illinois Collegiate League last summer.

John Marsaglia (Springfield Lanphied), a part time catcher the past two years is still the only backstop with experience but several newcomers, including freshman Tim West (Springfield Griffin) will challenge.

Three experienced infielders return, Steve Sarcia (Park Ridge-Maine South) at second base, John Theriault (Buffalo Grove-Wheeling) at shortstop and Gus Harvell (Maple Park), a combination first baseman-designated hitter.

Sarcia is the top returning hitter (.291) while Harvell's five homers and 21 RBIs is the best of anyone in the power department. Obvious gaps exist at third base and at least one outfield position.

Jim Lyons (Park Ridge-Maine South) had a successful freshman season in leftfield with a .262 average but needs to improve on defense. Doug Craig (Belleville-West), Pete Kasperski (Oglesby-LaSalle Peru) and Dan Evans (Benld-Gillespie) all up from the JV squad may fill some of the holes.

The Panthers 38 game schedule begins with a southern trip March 26-28 at Galveston, Texas.

Seven All-Americans Nucleus Of '75 Trackmen

Seventeen lettermen, including seven All-Americans, will form the nucleus of Eastern's indoor and outdoor track team that will begin defending its national championship in a few weeks.

The Panthers tied Norfolk State for the NCAA College Division title at Eastern last spring, and although several key performers graduated, new coach Neil Moore believes the 1975 contingent will again be among the best teams.

Mike Larson (Decatur Lakeview), Ken Burke (Tuscola), Rick Livesey (Niantic-Harristown), Jeff Nevius (Atlanta) and John Hudecek (Lombard) are the main men in track events.

Larson, a fourth place finisher in the nationals, holds the school mark of 4:05.9 in the mile run. Livesey, who finished second in his 3000-meter steeplechase speciality, has turned in a school record of 9:01.2. Burke's six mile run time of 29:21.0 is also a school mark. He finished fourth in the national meet.

Nevius and Hudecek, the two left-overs from the 440-yard relay team that was second at the Kansas Relays, are the top sprinters, and will lend depth on most relay teams. They have to take up the slack left by the graduation of 9.3 sprinter Sandy Osei-Agyeman.

Moore has brought in three for-

All-American Hon. Mention For "Big Alex"

Alex Russell (Middletown, Ky.), 6-4, 290 senior defensive lineman for the Panthers, has been chosen Honorable Mention All-American by the Associated Press.

Russell's selection to the College Division team is the third straight year an Eastern football player has been so honored. Nate Anderson, record breaking running back, was picked to the AP squad the previous seasons.

A transfer from Indian Hills (Iowa) Junior College, Russell has started every game at defensive tackle for the Panthers the past two seasons.

He stabilized a defense which gave up just two touchdowns per game this fall. It was the best defensive average since 1950. The Panthers finished with a 3-6-1 record.

"The pass rush and pursuit that Alex exhibited ranks among the best of any defensive lineman on our schedule this year," Defensive Coordinator Bernie Ricono said.

On campus as a guest speaker for the Business School's Marketing Club, Spitza had kind words for his alma mater. "I enjoy getting back to Eastern," he stated. "I think it offers so much, but not just academically. It's a whole life, really."

The young executive also had some nice things to say about one of his former mentors — Dr. Clifford Fagan of the Business School's Marketing Department. "Dr. Fagan has meant a lot to me. I value his judgment and he introduced me to a lot of different aspects of marketing and new ideas in the field," Spitza reflected.

Married and the father of two boys, Spitza and his wife Connie and two sons Jeff and Glenn reside in Naperville, Illinois.

eign students for spring semester, and two are sprinters in Osei-Agyeman's class, but it's a long time until the big meets and how they will make the transition in the U.S. is still an unanswered question.

Darrell Brown, the national long jump champ has graduated, but Toni Ababio (China) and Don Hale (Jamaica) are a strong one-two punch. They are also triple jumpers.

Robert Kratz (Granite City) and Scott Gifford (Riverdale) are tied for the school record in the pole vault at 15-0 feet. Andy Womack's (Overland Park, Kan.) 223-11 feet in the javelin set a school record with an unexpected 4th place finish at the nationals. Mike Miller (Fulton) is the leading shot putter and John Barron (Glen Ellyn) is tops in the high jump. He went 6-8 for a school record, and was 2nd in the national meet.

gram, also functions in the summer by regulating the level of air conditioning across campus. "We've researched this thing pretty well and I think it'll be a reality," Holt said. The project is currently before the Illinois Board of Higher Education for approval.

A number of other energy saving steps are already in effect at Eastern, according to Physical Plant Superintendent Everitt Alms. Building corridors are lit only by every other light

"so we can cut down on some electrical usage," said Alms. University maintenance vehicles are used only as "absolutely necessary" to help fuel savings and all vehicles and other pieces of equipment are being tuned and otherwise maintained for the same reason.

Other unique energy measures include the use of portable radios by maintenance personnel in order to reduce shop-to-job trips, and the installation of energy efficient fluorescent lighting tubes to reduce electrical usage.

Some electricity has also been saved by eliminating the use of the flood lights at the University's sign in front of Old Main. The illuminated Christmas star, which has been a traditional fixture atop Old Main during the holidays for over a quarter of a century, was an energy crunch casualty last year. It was not lit again this year.

The University also used physical facilities at a minimum during the holiday period from December 20 to January 6.

Scholar's Reception Held At Eastern

"Publish or perish" may not be the prevailing policy at Eastern but that apparently hasn't inhibited the University's faculty members from putting their share of writing into print.

A Scholar's Reception was held in the East Reading Room of the Booth Library on November 5. More than 140 faculty members were represented at the Reception by some 572 journal articles, 106 books and 116 miscellaneous publications. Also displayed were 45 books written by some 20 former members.

The exhibit, which was held under the supervision of University Archivist Don Swope, was sponsored by the Faculty Senate. According to Dr. Carol Elder, a Senate member, the material displayed may become a permanent library collection.

were enrolled in the program during fall semester. In order to check on the student's progress, and to answer questions and to conduct class for those in the program, professors from Eastern travel to Urbana at least one day per week. On some occasions several trips each week are made.

The new program would not be possible without the cooperation of the Urbana public schools, and Dr. Helwig stressed the importance of the professional personnel there. "Both teachers and students are reacting very favorably to the program, and everyone seems to be working harder than ever before," she said.

A Spring semester program is planned for the Decatur public schools and a number of students and teachers are looking forward to taking part in this exciting and rewarding part of education at Eastern.
